

Grade Advancement Policy

In early childhood, students are socially promoted to the subsequent grade.

In the elementary stage, students should have an overall average of 60% or above to get promoted to the subsequent grade level.

In middle school, students should succeed in all core subjects with a passing grade of 60% to get promoted to the next grade level. Students who fail in any of these subjects will have to sit an exam before the beginning of the next academic year. A student who fails four of the core classes will automatically be retained and will repeat the grade level during the next school year
